

Summary of the Disclosure

Certain compound semiconductor materials can be formed with nearly metal-like conductivity, while retaining the crystalline structure, high mobilities, and high carrier velocities of conventional semiconductors. Such bulk and thin-film states of matter, method of creating them, devices formed therefrom, and applications benefiting from said devices and states of matter are disclosed herein.